They had an interview with the author of Surrender on Howard Stern this morning. She has indulged 276 times. Oww!

Gotcha. I'm not surprised Howard Stern would seek to interview her. That guy is a riot! Did you see his movie?

Of course. I am a big fan. How about yourself. I am too old to appreciate all the strippers and such and frankly it gets redundant; but his political views and his personal experiences, the fact that he speaks up with no holding back; I like that, and Robins news. And to be honest there is no honesty anywhere else in media except his show. Ten years ago at his peak it was the single funniest thing ever produced. I remmember one show had Bellser, Kinnesin, Bobcat, and Gilbert Godfried. I laughed so hard I had to pull over on the parkway. At the end of the show they could not speak they just sat there making comments and laughing. I beleive he is the only media figure who speaks to the concerns of the middle class.

I'm not so much into Howard's political or social views as I am in the chicks he gets to come on his show.

Gotcha. From a quick look-around on the Salon site, it looks like a pretty interesting place.

Remmember stripper jeopardy? They would ask strippers questions and wager on whether they knew the answer. Only the question would be along the lines of Who's buried in Grants Tomb? Funny. Whats heavier a lb of feathers or a lb. of lead? They always got the money questions right though.

I think I vaguely recall that. There has been so much of that kind of thing on his show. I remember best the time Howard put mayonnaise on bologna and slung it on the stripper's butt. It sailed through the air and stuck right on her, suspended there like some kind of butt magnet.

The best was when he smacked the female across the butt with a dead fish and the eyes flew off and landed on her head. She was trying to win a contest. What a world!
