I will give Mr. Vinyl this; he don't quit easy. I admire that. Anybody notice all the eye makeup the anchormen wear on the Fox News channel? Spooky. And those blond replicant's they call anchorwomen. I know I shouldn't stoop to this level mentioning this but it is really bizarre. I like when they try to explain simple concepts that they are not sure their audience will get; they slow their speech and eeenuunciate. And offer these goofy analogies. The fundamentalist preachers do it too on TV. Remmember Jim Baker?

Can't debate with facts so insult your opponent. We offer analogies because it is the only way to get less informed people to understand. And no I don't think Democrats are stupid. Just misinformed. BTW I am not one of the religious right. I do believe in God but I don't go to church, thump bibles or believe in making abortion illegal. Again it's the liberal theory of "let's not discuss facts let's just group all Republicans together, call them religious zealots and discredit them anyway we can. Instead of actually coming up with solutions of our own. Actually it's really pathetic. Thankfully we now have the internet and cable news to discredit some of these untruths.

You see, 45% of their potential audience (and I'm guessing upwards of 80% of their actual audience) are retarded.

I see no references to Republicans in my post; it deals with the silly behaviour of the announcers on Fox News. If they are affiliated with the Republican Party then they are not a news organisation, they are a PAC and should declare that to be true and pay their dues.

F. Nietzsche mocked with Darwin's theory - his opinion is that only stupid and worthless species make progress (say bugs and rats), but they are not changed millions of years. The "higher" species are rare, have small descendants, and are very fragile...losers:-)
