You bet. That the wife and our new to us water toy, a Tollycraft tricabin-40. just got the thing home a few weeks ago. She'll be in the water for another month then up for the winter until the spring. maybe i'll cruise down the Hudson and visit you some day. I hear the long Island sound can be a real bitch sometimes.

Geez; beautifull lady and a beautifull boat..is this heaven?The sound can get rough; a couple big wrecks in there. You need to cruise down in July and come around Owls Head into the Atlantic then down through the State Boat Channels into the Great South Bay and hang in Fire Island. You can chart through to Shinnecock then around Montauk and stay at Shelter Island.(Don't make a mistake in Navigation and end up on Plum Island!) I am in Hither Hills that time of year and would love to visit and chew the fat. That is a pretty popular trip for boats of your size. It takes about a week with days lay-over in Ocean Beach and Montauk Point. You end up around Orient Point and through the sound back to the Hudson. Lots to see and do. Total length is about 300 miles around the island. Pretty easy navigation because you are always in sight of land. Connecticut is accessible also.Boat drinks anyone?She is a beaut.

More then 20 years ago, I was in the army ship (ferry boat) that ferried our trucks with 6m ship-ship rockets to military base on some island. (I can speak of that now, this country/army no longer exists :-)). Although we didn't like the army, my buddies and I had some pride, we were "chosen ones" who can "handle" those things. We were young and sharp, and probably thought that we are the coolest guys in the world, until some old man with two naked girls passed by us in his yacht. Girls waved to us...
