The joke about map is that old Europe is "older and older", and Moslim emmigrants - there are more and more of them. Finally, these days EU started to negotiate with Turkey about their membership...

The GNP of the EU will exceed the U.S. in five years. When they get increasingly nervous about the religous fanatiscism groing in this country they will start to build armies. Regardless of how you think about Germany and Poland and Russia/ they are very formidable foes. If not for that moron Hitler they would have owned most of Europe with Germanies armies alone. So get ready becuase this ain't over by a longshot.

Not exactly, but everyone here knows that`s not over. Bosnia, Kosovo, Serbia/Montenegro...it`s not finished. Not for now, but when they recover from human and material losses - here we go again.Some say that only chance is that somehow all of that countries enter in EU, get fat & reach...if EU doesn`t have enough problems.Another interesting things observed through ex-YU wars is that old political alliances from WW1 and WW2 are still alive...

Yep; and as the share of the petrochemical sink dwindles the wars begin. And fighting the German Army with competent leadership will be a little different from chasing bedouins with only homemade bombs across the dessert with bradley fighting vehicles.

What do you mean by "fighting the German Army"? By whom? I said to you in previous post about old alliances...we are here definitely on the German side, hehehe...

That was of course a little tongue in cheek; probably not in our lifetime but Who knows. There is a news release that the U.S. Army has for the third time lowered it's standards for admission. Soon we will have high school drop-outs trying to learn how to operate all that high tech equipment. On your side those old alliance's you mention; about how far back do they go? proving that history indeed repeats itself for all the self-satisfied empire builders out there.Not a problem for us here; the high and mighty pompositie's of the Republican Administration are self destructing under the weight of their own self-importance. The slick-tricks are coming home to roost for all those arrogant carnival barkers they call representatives. The religioso's can only be manipulated so much before they too begin to push back; at least the more intelligent amongst them.

Hey, aren`t German cars are the best? And also, I have nothing against tall cool blondes... Well, it doesn`t work for me, but I can reccomend it like alternative to politics and economics with war at the end...

I prefer Italian cars; they are more reliable; no? You have a beautifull wife so you better stop talking about girls before she finds out and throws your butt out the door.I remmember coming home one night from the bar and finding all of my friends stuff on the lawn; tossed from the second story window.
