There`re even more dangerous things than high-voltage... Just received a few pictures from the village just a few km from an old tower I planned to visit. Anti-tank land mine blew up a dredger, the driver is badly hurt. Interesting thing is that mine is from `91, and de-mining has been done in that part.I received the photos from a friend who works in de-mining...

Damn.Wouldn't it be great to shut the door on the past sometimes.Thanks for reminding me, seems like kindness, tolerance and understanding must be the most important things. Ironically, it is almost impossible to have these things when you need them most.

Well, another friend of mine has a "similar" saying: "Everything is full of damned sex-maniacs...but, when you actually need them most, it is almost impossible to get one..."The Past is now part of my future, the present is well out of hand"

Damir; what does that mean," Everything is full of damned sex maniacs"??? I can't figure that one out.Land mines really suck; the U.S. along with Cuba are the only two countries still stockpiling mines in the western hemisphere.; while we are the most active in funding the largest land-mine eradication efforts; we never the less refused to sign on to the land mine ban internationally. We haven't used them since 1991 and have not exported them since 92' all the while calling for a comprehensive ban yet failing to participate in the existing one.On March 1st 2004 the Bush Administration reversed a ten year policy to eliminate all anti-personell landmines.

"Big fan", huh? Maybe 20+ years before... I posted about movie "24 hr party people", remember? Huh, there are some mistakes in lyrics (the link I posted), it changes the meaning, the proper last line is:"...take my hand and I'll show you what was - it will be."P.S. Just realized that my friend made those pictures around the dredger, inside the mine-field...he don`t care and isn`t afraid
