

---

Subject: It is scary to think the Bush administration is allowing the terrorists into our southern borders

Posted by Manualblock on Mon, 14 Aug 2006 14:13:06 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

They walk across at will; it seems we are not even allowed to arrest them. If we do then the agents are prosecuted by the federal government.

---

Subject: Re: It is scary to think the Bush administration is allowing the terrorists into our southern border

Posted by Damir on Mon, 14 Aug 2006 14:26:24 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

Enlighten me...a few days/weeks ago they were just the poor Mexicans who (according to you) destroyed US health system and jobs/wages by their work. Now they are terrorists? Are they switched to the secret Plan 2?

---

Subject: Re: It is scary to think the Bush administration is allowing the terrorists into our southern border

Posted by Manualblock on Mon, 14 Aug 2006 15:03:43 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

The terrorists mingle with the illegals. Using sophisticated networks of international transport they smuggle their operatives over the porous borders amongst the hordes of travelers who cross with impunity and the blessing of the bush Whitehouse, where they are then dispersed throughout the U.S. awaiting instructions.

---

Subject: Re: It is scary to think the Bush administration is allowing the terrorists into our southern border

Posted by Bill Martinelli on Mon, 14 Aug 2006 16:08:12 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

That's an interesting point. The white house wants us to think we are under attack from terrorist from all sides. Including waging war on foreign soil to combat the terrorist cells that are planning to invade and do harm. Yet, as you point out; any group of terrorist could wander over the southern US borders posing as Mexican's. This is a misunderstanding of priorities the way I see it. Thiswhole administration is just bizzare.

---

---

Subject: Re: It is scary to think the Bush administration is allowing the terrorists into our southern border

Posted by Damir on Mon, 14 Aug 2006 17:18:32 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

Agree, 100%. And one more thing in which I'm certain - the countries who don't want and don't need terrorism, don't have it.

---

Subject: Re: It is scary to think the Bush administration is allowing the terrorists into our southern border

Posted by Manualblock on Mon, 14 Aug 2006 17:48:38 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

Bill has a good point; summed it up nicely and the reason why I had my suspicions about all of this hoopla in the first place. How serious can you be if you allow anyone into the country at will; and people are posting news reports from the Whitehouse Press Public Relations corps. How disengenous can you get? Read the post with the list of terrorist acts that were "supposedly Stopped", see who provided that information.Damir; thats a disturbing thought. So you say that countries are orchestrating these terrorist events to promote an agenda?

---

Subject: Re: It is scary to think the Bush administration is allowing the terrorists into our southern border

Posted by Damir on Mon, 14 Aug 2006 20:11:03 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

Everything you ever want to know is already in the "1984" book.But just a few thoughts - there're some European states who are "jeopardized" by terrorism, and another ones that don't have that problem. Why?I'll give you an example in former Yugoslavia - there're some Croatian dissidents political groups in Western Europe. They published various books and text against communism, and for independent Croatia. There're some radical terrorists organizations, too - from bombs to plane hijaks and armed groups...After the independency,1991., there're now known that most of that radical groups are leaded by YU secret agents, or they have some UDBA (secret police) agents provocateurs inside. Every stupid bomb action was a great political minus for their actual political goals. And nice excuse for political and police terror between intellectuals inside the Yugoslavia. And like "ace" in the sleeve in foreign politics. If UDBA didn't control or discredit some important political emmigrants, then they just killed them - tens of those murders, mostly in Germany. These days, Muenchen court opened one old case, where UDBA agents killed former director Durekovic of leading petrol YU company (INA), who emmigrated in Germany and wrote the books about corrupted communist goverment. The court proved that many "respected" Croatian (former YU) politicians/policemans were probably secret agents, responsible for very suspicious things in Germany.And you know what? Even new Croatian goverment obstructed the trial, they didn't give some very important documents/dossiers. Who trained those groups, give the money and arms, who are the agents between them and why...who were the UDBA agents/cooperators in YU, anyway? Even today, the truth cannot be known to the "ordinary people". Have no time and will to go in details, but you can have a part of the picture. Not the same situation that we have now, but just the illustration that terrorism problem can be more complex than we can even dream about. And today's (Islamic) terrorism problem can be solved in a week - by fair political solution for all sides (Israel and Palestinians, etc.).

---

---

Subject: Re: It is scary to think the Bush administration is allowing the terrorists into our southern border

Posted by Manualblock on Mon, 14 Aug 2006 23:43:06 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

I cannot even add to that. You said exactly what we all think. Perfect. And I don't think the Kennedy's were killed by crazy loners. No one on the bad side wanted two of the most American of any politicians who ever graced this country to form a dynasty of hard boiled anti-crime Presidents who feared no one. I mean crime in the larger sense; like the oil pirates.

---