Subject: Group Build Projects
Posted by AudioFred on Wed, 24 Jun 2009 15:23:44 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Can we still access the Group Build project plans? If I recall correctly, these were available in the old version of the ART forum.

Subject: Re: Group Build Projects
Posted by Wayne Parham on Wed, 24 Jun 2009 16:48:41 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Yes, all the ART Group Build plans are here.

Thanks for reminding me - I'll make this thread sticky so we can find everything easily.

Subject: Re: Group Build Projects
Posted by JiminyCricket on Wed, 21 Jul 2010 09:01:14 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

I had a quick look at the group build link (thanks). Not entirely sure what it is for though. People submit plans and work together on a project?

Subject: Re: Group Build Projects
Posted by AudioFred on Wed, 21 Jul 2010 11:00:46 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

JiminyCricket wrote on Wed, 21 July 2010 04:01I had a quick look at the group build link (thanks). Not entirely sure what it is for though. People submit plans and work together on a project?

A group build project is one where somebody has done the design work and built a prototype, then the project information is posted so anybody else can build it. In some cases a special price may have been negotiated with suppliers. For example, the parts for the Art Array project retail for about $400, but we negotiated a wholesale price of about $285 with Parts Express.

Subject: Re: Group Build Projects
Posted by JiminyCricket on Thu, 22 Jul 2010 09:48:16 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Hey thanks Audio Fred,

That is a cool idea. Very generous and a great way to spread knowledge. The discount side of it is good news too. This section definitely needs to be promoted.