I've been busy at the workshop all day only to come online tonight to read that Dolly Parton is

While we were growing up, we couldn't get enough of her songs like "Coat of Many Colors" and "Jolene."

I remember always playing Jolene any time that my wife is around. It is always a sweet moment.

Her kindness amidst her achievements were heartwarming. I pray for her family and all of us, the fans, in this difficult situation. I've been playing her songs for an hour now. Is anyone else playing her songs in a way to honour her today

I admired her very much. Despite the loud image she did up for being an entertainer. She was a tribute to being real and in touch with her fans and people in general who could see that great honest persona she had. I think the movies she did made her more aware of to most people rather than a country singer. But they both complemented each other.

So long Dolly, you did a fine thing while you were here.

So true. She is one of those that you kinda feel like will live forever.

Certainly our memory of her will.

Her service to humanity right from the 80s is commendable. She singlehandedly helped reduce the county dropout rate from 35% to 6% with her act of service when she encouraged kids in 8th and 7th graders in Sevier County to keep working hard to graduate. Those who made it, she offered 500 bucks at that time.

There are numerous documented acts of kindness that Dolly Parton did when she was alive, and for that, she will be hugely missed by family and friends.

Her songs play on. We shall never forget.

Her impact on humanity was undeniable. She laid a blueprint for others to follow.

I know heavens will be happy to have a soul like hers because she is truly an angel.

Her death was a shock to me. I have always hoped that she lives forever because of her immense love for human development and progress.

I still remember watching the clip below on how she came up with the title for the song "Jolene". It was lovely to watch. Check it out below

Rare to see her involved in any controversial topics or situations.

She was such a lovely soul!

This video shows how much she cares about humanity. Such a big loss to the world but I guess she is in a better place now.
