Subject: Radio in the 21st c
Posted by Dizzy on Thu, 03 Jun 2010 14:09:10 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

It seems like plenty of people still own radios, but who uses them still? In particular, I am curious as to the digital radios such as can be picked up through TV receivers-do these get much use?

Subject: Re: Radio in the 21st c
Posted by Wayne Parham on Thu, 03 Jun 2010 15:46:12 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

I listen to Pandora stations sometimes, as background music. And of course, I often listen to our own streaming internet station, ART radio. But I still love my old tube radios the best.

Subject: Re: Radio in the 21st c
Posted by Dizzy on Sat, 05 Jun 2010 21:44:47 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

My daughter had a little radio for a time-tiny thing that didn't have a headphone socket and only had limited output. Then she got an iPod, and if I'm honest I wouldn't know where the radio is anymore. She does Pandora on it, but certain in our house radio is no longer popular.

Subject: Re: Radio in the 21st c
Posted by Chuckles101 on Thu, 10 Jun 2010 21:18:32 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

I have never really used radios until recently actually. It came with my wake up light and I think it is great since I can listen to the news whilst waking up.

Subject: Re: Radio in the 21st c
Posted by JiminyCricket on Wed, 14 Jul 2010 22:16:38 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Dizzy wrote on Thu, 03 June 2010 09:09It seems like plenty of people still own radios, but who uses them still? In particular, I am curious as to the digital radios such as can be picked up through TV receivers-do these get much use?

I have a radio inbuilt into my CD player/tape combo. I guess this makes it somewhere between the traditional type and the digital radios you mention

Can't say I use it though. To be honest endless background chatter annoys me intensely.

Subject: Re: Radio in the 21st c
Posted by addictedtosound on Wed, 18 Aug 2010 07:00:40 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

I rarely listen to radio. I have started to listen a lot more over the past couple of years. I don't seem to have the time to sit still and listen.