I wondered how good it would be after the mixed reviews I read. After watching it last night night I tend to believe that most mainstream reviewers must get jaded after a while.This movie was better than the second one IMHO. My only dislike was the emphasis on the special effects and fight scenes. I realize that we've become a visual society and they're required to draw a large audience. However, I'm the odd duck that enjoys the byplay in the dialog more than the effects. I'm pretty sure we'll see at least one more since this one made money. Especially the way it ended.

I liked it. At times, it seemed overly dramatic. After all, it was really an adventure movie. At times, I thought the "inspirational diatribes" were a bit much. But I still liked it a lot.

It was decent, but it was sort of a disappointment. Especially the end, I hate it how they say they'll keep it as a trilogy, but then they have something that will make it seem to last forever. (the fountain of youth). They need to end it because its getting dragged out and its getting boring
