Sales; they need to be in the for sale section. We have no way of knowing who is selling any item from another site; thats why there is a seperate forum for sales. A guy could put up links on every forum for a sale item under the guise of showing it to the members. I am sure Bill didn't do that but who'se to say someone else won't?I have to moderate this forum so I have an obligation to point that out.EEts my yob.I don't like to stifle free expression thats why I ask that I not have to respond unless absolutely neccessary.Sokay by you?

If you know the person, and you know they're not a shill, seems OK to me. Then it's just passing the word. If you don't know the person, maybe the benefit of the doubt is in order. But if you know a post is an ad or a shill, then that's what probably should go. That's what has gotten out of hand other places.

O'Kay with me if it's o'kay with you. As I said I don't suggest anything about the post other than it should be in the for sale column.

I was originally going to suggest that we cut off the fingers he used to type the message, but I calmed down.
