I have a Roku Soundbridge which is a small unit that takes all of your digital music from your computer and plays it through your stereo system. It also has a readout that displays the artist, title, etc. and a remote control. It's a great way to organize and access your music library.

Does anyone use this or any other music system? Roku discontinued this line and I was curious if there are others in case I ever need to replace my Soundbridge.

Seems like everyone I know doing this sort of thing is running a Squeezebox.

I believe Kim Beumer of Crescendo Systems used a Roku at LSAF. He's had it for the last two years now and likes it quite well.
