The song "Dare to Dream" was sung by Olivia Newton John and John Farnham at the opening of the Sydney Olympics in 2000. Someone showed me the YouTube video of this performance: http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=ZGjOiXB5n4c

It's disappointing that what's available in Amazon.com is only its karaoke version: http://www.amazon.com/gp/product/B002P5L39U

Someone else told me that a limited number of copies were sold in 2000. After a few months, the remaining copies on the shelves were taken out. I'm now beginning to believe this actually happened. But one would wonder why.

It's a great song, strange it's not still widely available. I wonder if it's limited in production because it's linked to a special event. Anyhow you could try a download site such as this one, which does indeed have it listed as available. Enjoy.
