When I am upset, music is a huge part of my recovery. I can't imagine there not being any music to listen to. When I'm upset, I get lost in the lyrics and sing my heart out. It always stops me from crying.

Really? Next time try listening to REM's "Everybody Hurts" or Sinead O'Conner's " Nothing Compares 2U" and try to keep from crying. If you can do can that,then you don't have a heart.

I'm just kidding. Music helps me a lot too.

Yeah, music can really set a mood - from romantic, to sad, to happy, etc. There is also some perfect music to walk to - I have lots of cool stuff on my ipod.

Music can also take you back. Put on anything from the 80's and I am right back in high school. (And somehow I still know all the words!)

Like everyone here, music is part of my life. When I am really down, I play music non stop, no lyrics, just music.

For some bizare reason, I listen until I cry,then I am able to pick myself up and rejoin the land of happiness.

This reminds me of the song "Thank You For The Music" by ABBA. I'm not sure if that is the title of the song but I agree that music affects our lives. I wonder what our world will be like without music.

I would cry if I didn't have music in my life - although I am completely tone deaf and can't play a note. Music is a part of the rhythm of life.

I like the way music can calm me or energize me. My sons play soccer and prior to a game they will turn up their music to get their adrenaline flowing, which in effect readies their bodies for intense physical play. Music is quite profound in the power it can have.

I've never encountered anything that has the affect on mood that music does.

I can make folks cry by playing "The Circle Game" by Joni Mitchell, laugh by playing "Million Dollars" by the BareNaked Ladies, or twist them with some old Leonard Cohen.

There's a 'color' to music, and with it we weave a kaleidascope.

You are 100% right, music is amazing. Music lifts my spirits when I'm feeling blue and calms me down when I'm overly excited. I love to blare my radio in the car and sing at the top of my lungs!

Listening to music is definitely one of my favorite things to do! I use it to unwind after a tough day. It gets me through the hard times. I also use it to express whatever is on my mind. And hearing Christmas songs during the holidays definitely puts a smile to my face!

That's a fantastic final statement, very touching. I am like everyone else here, it's impossible to imagine life without music. I am a bit mad that somehow my standby xmas CD for the kids has been scratched.

Music is a huge part of my life as well. I'm not sure what I would do without it. It's very relaxing, at the same time, if you are upset, it can sometimes make things worse if you select the wrong song lol. Trust me, I've done that before.
