Whenever I set up one of the audio systems, I have preferences for which tunes I play on the them first: some songs have the necessary blending of range that lets me 'tweak' and fine tune things.

Welcome to the Danger Zone, Enter Sandman (great for the lower ranges, and a certain Leon Russell tune are among my favorites.

Anyone else have favorites to "audio test" with, and why? I could use some new stuff to sound-check with.

There is a song by the name of "Enough", from the band Gravity Kills. It's a somewhat obscure song from the '90s.

The audio composition of this song has everything you need to run sound tests. Be careful. It's a powerful song.
