
Subject: Projector or Big Screen TV
Posted by Lancelot on Sat, 11 Dec 2010 02:43:48 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Which is better for a home theater, a projector or a TV with big screen? I haven't been into a house with a projector but there is a projector in the office. Which one is more affordable?

Subject: Re: Projector or Big Screen TV
Posted by Wonderwoll on Mon, 13 Dec 2010 07:58:51 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

I would say the TV is easier because it is just there and ready. On the other hand you can buy any size screen for the projector and it's portable, so good for special showings or those who don't want a TV to dominate the room.

Subject: Re: Projector or Big Screen TV
Posted by Lancelot on Fri, 17 Dec 2010 12:34:03 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

I agree with you. I like to have a projector but my problem is at daytime. I need a room that is dark enough for the projector to show the movie like inside the theaters. Any suggestions on how I can do this?

Subject: Re: Projector or Big Screen TV
Posted by Adveser on Mon, 20 Dec 2010 01:30:59 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Lancelot wrote on Fri, 17 December 2010 06:34 I agree with you. I like to have a projector but my problem is at daytime. I need a room that is dark enough for the projector to show the movie like inside the theaters. Any suggestions on how I can do this?

Most big box stores sell blackout curtains. But they aren't what I would call cheap. They are heavy and usually black, so you might have to install new curtain rods.

Subject: Re: Projector or Big Screen TV
Posted by GuitarStrings on Fri, 24 Dec 2010 03:34:20 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

I would personally go with a projector instead of a big-screen television that would be both heavy and not something you could easily move from place to place. I think the projector would cost more but be more convenient, and you can choose different sizes, which helps if you have only a small area of wall to project from.

Subject: Re: Projector or Big Screen TV
Posted by Lancelot on Thu, 30 Dec 2010 04:00:27 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

So are the curtains use to block light or are they the part where the projection is directed at?

GS, the size feature is also one of the reasons why I like projectors.
