Where do you find new music groups or fresh favorite songs? From friends, online, from the radio, or from some other source?

It's been awhile since I've listened to music on the radio and TV in order to catch up with the latest offerings. I usually just hear about a certain artist in the news and then I watch out for their songs on the radio. Or I go to youtube and type in the artist's name or the title of the song I like.

That's pretty much how I get my music nowadays.

There's a website I frequent for new music. It's www.musicloversgroup.com and they regularly update when new music comes up. I also have my myspace account which I only use to look for new music since no one really uses myspace except for musicians. When I'm bored I surf youtube for old music that's new to my ears. I usually don't enjoy music on the Billboard Top so I try looking for my own sources for good music

I can't remember the last time I bought new music. I usually go to the used record/cd store once a month and pick up anything that catches my eye.
