What is your vote for the worst movie you've ever seen? There are some movies that I don't care for and won't watch, but I remember paying to see 'Accidental Tourist' and then had to walk out because it was so BAD! It had a very slow start and I would compare the beginning to someone talking about brushing their teeth --- totally uneventful, and who cares? The movie had good reviews, but I couldn't watch after the first 15 minutes because it was like talking about cereal.

My vote is for Talledega Nights: The Ballad of Ricky Bobby. Not even mentioning all the foul language, it is a long and bad movie, the kind that you don't even want your mother to know about, much less watch.

The worst production I have ever seen was in 8th grade. They put on some cheesy video that was basically a bunch of suburban white kids trying crack. The catch is there was one black kid who for some reason was very webster-like. Naturally he had a heart defect that killed him when he had to stop what he was doing (eating dinner, which is bizarre) to go score some more and smoke it in the bathroom with the shower on as a cover. I should mention this was scripted. If you can call that a script.

The acting was so poor the majority of the class just laughed for 30 minutes straight. Considering that this had to happen every year and no one took any of it seriously whatsoever, I really wonder why they chose to show this and about a half-dozen other videos. We would huddle around the TV like we were about to watch something really great every time.

I have yet to find any of this on YouTube unfortunately. I would pay good money to see those again!

*Note my opinion of "worst" is still something entertaining, but so poorly put together it has the exact opposite intended effect.
