With the NBA playoffs going on right now, I find it interesting to see the types of music different venues play to get the crowd and home team energized. I'm a fan of the old fashioned organ playing, although there are some great hip hop beats that go well with sports too. Does anyone else pay attention to this? I know it's a minor thing compared to the game, but I think it adds to the atmosphere of the event.

We are usually buying food or in line for the bathroom when the game is not going one. However, I agree with you it does add to the atmosphere. For me it doesn't really matter what it is.
