
Subject: Scaring Yourself with Sound

Posted by audioaudio90 on Sat, 23 Apr 2011 15:50:47 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Have you ever forgotten you muted the board, turned the volume way up, then remembered and un-muted? I did this a couple times when I was first learning and nearly fainted, I was so startled!

Somehow I managed to avoid blowing the speakers.

Subject: Re: Scaring Yourself with Sound

Posted by Roxie on Mon, 25 Apr 2011 15:40:18 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

I have done this a few time, but when in my car. Usually when I use the iPod with the auxiliary cable, I need to put the volume really high. I take the iPod off, and when I get in the car the next time, I scare the bejeezus out of myself.

Subject: Re: Scaring Yourself with Sound

Posted by audioaudio90 on Wed, 27 Apr 2011 14:31:31 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Oh I've done that in the car too but in a professional studio the sheer volume was literally stunning. It was a very physical event; I seriously thought I was going to have a heart attack for a second.

Subject: Re: Scaring Yourself with Sound

Posted by MusicJunkie on Wed, 27 Apr 2011 23:01:20 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

This happens to me all the time when my darling husband turns on the surround sound. We will be watching something and it's relatively quiet then something happens-like a gunshot or bomb-and I'm jumping because it was so loud. I can imagine it would be a whole different experience in the studio.

Subject: Re: Scaring Yourself with Sound

Posted by mixinlady on Sun, 01 Jan 2012 15:53:34 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

I wish there were universal sound control on things that make noise so that the volume could auto-adjust before my eardrums are affronted. Too many times have I turned on the TV or stereo and experienced a blast because the last thing I was listening to was on the quiet side.

Subject: Re: Scaring Yourself with Sound
Posted by j0ann3 on Tue, 03 Jan 2012 22:46:07 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Sometimes when I work really late I put my music really loud while driving so I can stay awake but then in the morning I completely forget in my rush to go to work and I just jump on my seat when I turn the radio and the DJ is just shouting at me!xx
