Subject: Do you sing?
Posted by BluesBrother77 on Fri, 06 May 2011 02:31:10 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

I sing and dance in the car all the time. I know I can't carry a tune in a bucket but I figure it's my car everyone in it can suffer. Do you sing and if so, where and are you any good?

Subject: Re: Do you sing?
Posted by gofar99 on Fri, 06 May 2011 03:08:14 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Hi, Not if I can help it. My singing would probably cause a major exodus from wherever I was. I even try not to hum....

Subject: Re: Do you sing?
Posted by Bill Wassilak on Thu, 12 May 2011 02:23:49 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Awwe heck NO. Not in a car but maybe at a small get together, and my friends and me we're all drunk goofing around. My liryics were totally perverted.

But I did have a number 1 hit single, it was called 'My mama was a hooker my daddy was a pimp'.

Subject: Re: Do you sing?
Posted by Adveser on Thu, 12 May 2011 13:36:20 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Yes. I have an over 5 octave range from Eb1-F6, but my tessitura is 3 Octaves from E2-E5. I sing as a Baritone and as a Tenor.

Subject: Re: Do you sing?
Posted by gofar99 on Sun, 15 May 2011 20:37:58 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Say What?

Subject: Re: Do you sing?
Posted by Adveser on Tue, 17 May 2011 06:21:34 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

More info because my claim is fairly hard to believe:

I have overdeveloped hearing due to a medical condition which has given me the ability to hear exactly how a singer resonates their voice and produces their notes. Because of this, my voice insists on singing exactly the way I hear it. Because of this 5 years of endless practice have yielded a vocal range that is almost unheard of. I can also sing at over 100db for up to 8 hours in a day because my voice will not allow me to do anything that causes it pain or resistance. I have always talked in a more nasal voice instinctively which means when I'm not singing, my voice is constantly resting because I don't open my vocal folds when I talk. It's not as fun as it sounds, when I'm not on medication to control it, my tactile sense is so uncoordinated that I practically lose my ability to control my voice for singing. This has been the major setback because my brain will ignore my sense of touch if I am using my ears intensely.

It is not impossible to have an extreme vocal range or ability
It just requires extreme circumstances such as deliberately and instinctively talking using the smallest amount of effort possible since you could speak and having hearing so sensitive it has been tested that you can hear at close to zero decibels, normal being around 25db. attempting to sing death metal or letting out a piercing scream is going to hurt you if you don't know what you are doing. If I were anyone else, my voice would be as raspy and worn as Rod Stewarts' if not completely ruptured a few times and crippled.

Most of the music I listen to either features virtuoso Hard Rock singers like Joe Lynn Turner or the classically trained singers that gravitate towards Symphonic/Power/Progressive/Operatic Metal

---

Subject: Re: Do you sing?
Posted by Forest on Sat, 04 Jun 2011 01:55:36 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

I admire people who can sing because I cannot. I don't do it in private or public. I'm awful and its just embarrassing even if I am just embarrassing myself.

Subject: Re: Do you sing?
Posted by DJ Dave on Wed, 27 Jul 2011 12:38:32 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

I've been told that I can sing, but I think people were just being nice. And I only sing after I've had a few drinks - maybe they were only listening after they had a few drinks!

Subject: Re: Do you sing?
Posted by gofar99 on Wed, 27 Jul 2011 22:57:52 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Hi All, I don't know how well I can sing, but the neighborhood dogs all start to howl when I do

Subject: Re: Do you sing?
Posted by Danny on Thu, 18 Aug 2011 19:04:52 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

I sing. I am told that I actually sound pretty good. I guess I'm just a little shy, though and don't always feel comfortable singing in front of a crowd.