I wanted to know if there were any fans of dark ambient and noise music bands out there other than myself? The last post on instrumental music made me wonder...

For me, I have been listening to Raison d'Etre, Fall of the Grey Winged One, Megoptera, and Satori a lot lately. I also like things like Shizuo, Arcana, Christian Marclay, Steve Beresford, and many others who perform in "satellite" genres to noise and dark ambient music.

I do not know what dark ambient and noise music is. Can you describe the genre in more detail? It has a very interesting name.

Hey there Chicken! (As a side note: I almost took that as my user name! Nice one!)

I assume you know ambient music, like background music, typically electronic in nature, although it does not have to be. It is sort of film soundtrack music of a sort. It is intended that one listens to it actively or it can be enjoyed as more of a passive, in the background sort of filler.

Dark Ambient music relies more heavily on minor keys and dissonant sounds, low pad drones, and contrasting composition elements without being too overbearing. Think, scary horror movie soundtracks that are still in a semi-relaxing stage of development in their presentation. Brooding, spooky music that houses interesting textures and unfolds in an intelligently organized compositional path. (At least, the ideal pieces would do most of this.)

Hope that helps. There are SO many of these types of performers. I could probably name two hundred of them, but they are all so different, I would not be able to recommend one that suits your tastes, perhaps. Maybe check out some of the bands I mentioned above and enjoy!

Dark ambient music is awesome! I love the more jazz noise and gothic type stuff. Fall of the Grey Winged One is a lovely band! I also like PAS, Akoustik Timbre Frekuensi, Murmurists, Anton Mobin, and Ten Horned Beast.

Yes, Goatmaster, that does help. Your description was about what I was thinking, but I wanted some clarification just in case I was wrong. Thanks!
