I don't know about anyone else, but I use an alarm clock radio to wake myself up in the morning. I started using one when I was back in college, and never grew out of it. Anyone else does this as well? I prefer it over an obnoxious beeping noise!

Hi, Not any longer since I retired. But I have fond ( ) memories of Cousin Brucie on WABC 770 AM out of New York. Many mornings he did the mean deed on me.

My crying daughter is my alarm clock these days. However, when I did use an alarm clock, the radio was definitely more pleasant than the beeps.

I used to use one in high school! I loved waking up to great music! I still have the alarm clock radio but it's all talk on the radio stations so I lost my interest in it

The radio doesn't wake me up. I probably just dance in my sleep! No, I have to have the loud, obnoxious sound, otherwise I will sleep right through it.

I prefer the radio option on my alarm clock too. Sometimes the songs will incorporate themselves into my dreams for a few minutes before waking me.

I don't have a radio alarm clock now, but when I did, I would set it to the beeping alarm, and reset it to the radio after it woke me up. That way I'd lie in bed for a few more minutes, half-asleep, listening to the songs. I remember years ago when I was in Chicago, they would play 'Gasolina' a lot!

I'm usually so upset that I have to wake up early, that I prefer to have the obnoxious beeping noise. When I've tried a clock radio, the positive vibe just irritates me. The beeping noise matches my grumpy mood.

Unfortunately, I have one of those obnoxious, beeping alarm clocks, lol, but I did have an alarm clock radio at one time. I wish they would come out with an iPod dock that also functions as an alarm clock, so that I could wake up to my own music, free of commercials and those annoying morning talk shows!

Hi Sony makes one that can use either an iPhone or iPod. Called a Dream Maker and runs just under $40 at Walmart.

It is very interesting to see what everyone's preferences are. I suppose if I was a heavier sleeper I would not opt for the radio to wake me up. I'd probably sleep through it! haha
