Hi Everyone, In the first photo you will see my able assistants. In the second photo the reason they were so intent on taking over a part of my work bench. The largest of the assistants is nearly 15 pounds, the smallest 12. They are very good at pushing keys on my PC (not in the photo) as well. I haven't been able to teach them to build projects yet, but there is hope as they can find and carry off components with great ease.

That's awesome, Bruce. Three black cats! Bad luck for that lizard.

Hi Everyone, I have been converting my garage into a workshop. This is because I have run out of space in my present one. Well if you recall a while ago I had some reptilian assistants. It seems they all didn't go away. There is a very tame and rather large lizard in the new shop. It may well be one of the earlier ones that has grown up. About 1.25 diameter and 8-9 inches long. I actually had to prod it to move out of the way earlier today. It just watches what I do - even hammering within about a foot of it. Like I said real tame.

That's a good cat, not to use the speaker cone as a scratch post.

Hi I was concerned about the three black cats we have... the Martin Logan Vistas look like giant scratching posts.
