I saw a $30 stand in Best Buy the other day that's meant to hold the Xbox 360 console, up to 13 games, up to 4 controllers and it even has a place to hang a Guitar Hero controller. Anyone else seen anything similar?

I haven't really looked at home theater furniture in awhile, but I can see where that stand would be handy. Video games are fun, but they tend to clutter the living room up if not carefully organized.

I really like the idea of having a place to hang your Guitar Hero controller. I haven't played that game recently, but I remember how irritating it was to store the guitar in a quick and convenient way.

No I haven't seen any furniture built specifically for video gaming, but it sounds like a great idea. Goodness knows us gamers could all use more space to store our stuff!

This sounds like a niche business idea that could gain some ground when the next big console releases. Something that better held the Kinect and Wii sensors would be appreciated.

From a business perspective, it'd probably be best if the stand could hold all major consoles. Then there's a wider market of buyers, instead of focusing exclusively on the Xbox.

I would love something like this for our game room. We have a Wii and Xbox Kinect though. I have never seen a table or stand like this before. 30 is cheap.
