If you had the option would you rather go with a wireless surround system set up or the traditional set up with wires & such? Also, how much of a price difference would there be?

I'm torn on this issue. I'd love the convenience of wireless, but I find wired systems are generally more reliable and that is important too.

Well wireless is great when its convenient but for us we never seem to get anything to fully work that way. Corded tends to run better and its something we have stuck with for a few years now, it just needs to be well hidden.
