Do you enjoy songs with lots of panning? For example, the lead singer's voice is panned hard left, then suddenly hard right.

I always find it interesting to listen to.

It's pretty cool if they don't go overboard with it. It's more a special effect kind of thing for parts of a song, but too much of it can drive you nuts or it least it does me.

Overdoing the panning doesn't drive me nuts but it can be distracting at times. I like it more if it fits within the song, so to speak, rather than being there just because.

I think something is wrong with one of my speakers/headphones when this happens. I agree with Bill that it can be neat for a time or two, but too much tends to make me feel woozy.
