Seems since people are dropping out kind of like flies its only fitting we have some chatter about it. Anyone want to get into a (nice) political debate or has everyone decided to ignore the subject until this Fall?

I'm all for polite, but the candidates don't seem to be. We need change, and to get it we need our elected officials whomever they will be to work together to get it. Personally I don't care who gets elected as long as they do the job. Act like professionals trying to fix the problems and not like a bunch of squalling children. (jumping off the soap box now)

I have to agree with you GoFar. I don't care who is in office, but once you get elected do your job! The whole world is laughing at us now because our elected officials are so busy fighting each other that nothing gets done.
