Subject: iPod vs non-iPod MP3 Players
Posted by timron on Wed, 25 Apr 2012 19:57:44 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

What are some of the differences between iPod and non-iPod MP3 players? Why is the iPod so much more popular than all the other brands of MP3 players out there? Which do you prefer?

Subject: Re: iPod vs non-iPod MP3 Players
Posted by iLoveiPod on Thu, 26 Apr 2012 19:50:56 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Well, as you can probably already tell by my username, I prefer iPod brand MP3 players. I've owned a couple of non-iPod MP3 players in the past and the major differences in the ones I owned were storage capacity and software compatibility. The iPod I own has a 160 GB hard drive, which is actually larger than the hard drive on my laptop, and plenty large enough for my entire music collection, plus all my pictures. Also, iPods sync with iTunes, whereas most non-iPod MP3 players do not. So, in my opinion, it really comes down to how much storage space you need and which software you prefer to use to sync your music with.

Subject: Re: iPod vs non-iPod MP3 Players
Posted by gofar99 on Sun, 29 Apr 2012 15:42:03 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Hi, Yes .... storage and compatibility. Add in accessories. I use a Sony and it does what I need and will sync with itunes (although I don't use that feature). I like it because it is an in between size. Bigger than a nano and smaller than an iPod. Also battery life is about 30 hours on a charge. It holds enough music for any trip I've been on recently... about 500 hi-res MP3s (I rip them at 320K).

Subject: Re: iPod vs non-iPod MP3 Players
Posted by LuvMartin on Sun, 29 Apr 2012 17:43:55 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

I just can't bring myself to pay the Ipod price! To me they are just seriously overpriced just because they have Ipod in front of them. I bought a Panasonic one that has more storage than I could ever use for less than $40!