What do you do on long flights when your iPod battery simply won't last after a few hours? Switch to doing something else? Or listen to that horrid in-flight music, perhaps?

I don't mind browsing the in-flight music for a little while, but I agree that it's usually not very good. In my case, when I don't have music on the plane I'll turn to a book. I don't get to read often enough, so I like to take advantage of that spare time on a flight.

It depends on which airline I am flying with. I try to only use JetBlue. They have individual TVs on the back of each seat. I watch a bit of TV and then I listen to music.

This is not a problem for me as I have never been on a plane before.This is some good information to have though in case I ever do go on a plane trip. Note to self: Take extra batteries for Mp3 player!

Get a Sony MP3 player... they will run for about 30 hours on a charge.
