I really wish I had checked the weather for this weekend and planned accordingly. After 2 weeks of 90 plus temperatures and sticky humidity the high today is 75 with a nice breeze. Our youngest is still an infant so we have to be careful how much we do outdoors with him in the heat.

Same here; the high was in the 70s with low humidity, and there was the occasional gentle breeze. It was the perfect morning to go fishing, except for one thing - I had to be at work at 5:00AM. It was depressing to think about all the smallies and red-ear bream I could've been catching (and having for lunch!).

This morning, it's cloudy, humid, and rainy, and is supposed to hit 90 degrees. Tomorrow's gonna be hotter yet. I can't wait for winter!

It's supposed to be 95 here today. I like hot weather but not quite this hot. I will have to deal until September or so, though.

We had much cooler than normal temperatures around here this weekend too, and we spent most of it in the garden. Today it has been rainy off and on with a prediction of strong storms tonight. The garden could use the rain, but I could do without the storms!
