It's storming this morning, and the sound of the thunder and the rain is soothing. Thunder can sometimes be startling when the lightning is really close by, but most of the time I enjoy listening to it grumble.

I am not a huge fan of thunder, but I like listening to the rain. Our sun room has a tin roof and I love the way it sounds in there when it rains.

I'm surprised you enjoy the sound of rain on your tin roof. The one time I was under a tin roof during a storm, it was so loud I couldn't converse with others.

I think I'll change my username to Gravedigger. Just thought I'd go back a year to see what was going on, saw the title thunder and clicked. I'm one who loves a good old fashioned thunderstorm. A roof raiser, gully washer.....what other terms are there?

Here in Arkansas, we call 'em "toad stranglers."

I too love a good thunderstorm. I enjoy sitting on the porch with a cup of good coffee and watching the lightning and falling rain. That is, as long as it's a rather tame thunderstorm, not like when a 500 yard wide rotating funnel cloud passed over my house a couple years back..... When things are looking rough, you can smell "that" smell and feel "that" feeling in the air, and the sky turns a weird shade of green or amber, Thermionic forgets the coffee and goes lookin' for a fraidy hole.

Well goodness, I'd hope so! When things are getting that bad, it's nothing to mess with.

I don't see green skies around here as much; I saw them more in the midwest where the tornadoes are stronger.
