Subject: Obama's end run around the Dream Act

President Obama announced today that his administration would no longer deport illegal immigrants who were brought to the US as children. Here is one article about it. What do you think? The new policy is almost a mirror image of the DREAM Act which has stalled in Congress. I must admit that I think this is just an attempt to buy the Hispanic vote for the November elections.

I think the man needs to show some respect for the Constitution and stop using "executive orders" to get everything he wants done. Hopefully, he's serving his last few months in office now.

I absolutely agree with you Love2. Obama has signed more executive orders in the past year than some President's signed in their whole terms! There is a reason the founding fathers set up three levels of government, and this President (a constitutional law student no less) tramples all over them.
