Subject: Computer Audio
Posted by Rockhaven on Thu, 09 Aug 2012 04:16:25 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

I have been having quite a hard time getting my sound to work like it should. Whenever I watch online youtube or online videos, sounds like it is skipping or is fragmented. It doesn't do this for all online streaming videos, and it plays spotify music ok. I am trying to figure if this is a software or hardware problem. Does anyone have any experience with this problem? I have a Windows XP operating system.

Subject: Re: Computer Audio
Posted by Wayne Parham on Thu, 09 Aug 2012 12:35:37 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Your internet connection speed isn't high enough to support the video feeds. The bottleneck may be at your house, at the ISP or even on the other end, at the server. If it's on your end, you can fix it by upgrading hardware or ISP services.

Subject: Re: Computer Audio
Posted by Rockhaven on Thu, 09 Aug 2012 13:35:42 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Ah, that is good to know! I wasn't too crazy about the thought of having to get a new sound card or getting a headache in having to look up better software. Thank you so much for your help!