The other day I took my earbuds out of my ears to talk to a friend. It was only later that I discovered that the soft cover had come off the earbud and was sticking out of my ear the entire time. I must have looked so stupid. I don't know why she didn't tell me.

I'm not laughing at you, I'm laughing with you. She might not have noticed. They are kind of small and she might not have looked at your ear.

Well, since she didn't say something to you I am going to have to assume that she didn't even notice. Even if she did, so what? Don't sweat the small stuff.

Since I'm a music addict, all I do is turn the volume down if I want to talk to someone. People who know me understand so they don't see it as being rude.
