Toys can scare you half to death when the batteries are running low. I was walking through the dark living room right before I went to bed and suddenly one of my daughter's toys started randomly singing to me.

That's hilarious! Sorry to laugh at your scare but I can just picture that. Too funny!

It's happened to me too, so I do sympathize with the heart attack, but it's funny too.

Have you ever had that happen during a really bad storm? I have. There was a huge clap of thunder and a doll started talking. I had a flashback to Poltergeist.

I can hear it now. Polly Doll singing "Do you love me too" like like a 45 RPM record on 33 speed. (Or is it the other way around?)
