Would you pay $408,000 for an electric guitar? Would your answer change if you knew it was custom made for the Beatles?

If I were rich, I would buy it. I'm not, though, so it's a moot point for me.

Absolutely not! It doesn't matter who it was made for. That is some serious cash to have in a guitar? It doesn't matter how much money I had there isn't anything that I could use to justify paying such a price for a guitar.

It's definitely an extravagance, even for rich people. I'm just such a huge Beatles fan, though, that if I were raking in the dough, I'd want it.

I don't know, Chicken. I agree that it's neat but that is an awful lot of money to spend on a possession. I think I'd rather just admire it at someone else's house or at a museum.

I agree with Turtle, it's only for people that have too much money they don't know what to do with. Way too much money for a guitar, even if a Beatle played it or not.
