You know how the oldies or classics stations always have a lot of the same songs in rotation? This repetition can lead to a person not liking a particular song, right? The other day I was listening to a song I must have heard a thousand times, but I found myself focusing on the structure of the song. How it was written. Has anyone else ever "zoned out" a song like that?

Yes, sometimes I will analyze songs as I listen to them. This is more frequent if I don't like the song. If I like the song, I just give myself up to enjoyment.
