Subject: Music Worth It
Posted by The Mother on Sun, 21 Jul 2013 17:21:47 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

I hate to sound like I'm getting old, but maybe I'm just getting old. I haven't heard any new music worth playing on a good stereo in a long time.

Oh, There's the occasional single that really catches my attention, but it seems that no artist can put out more than one good song.

Or is it that I live in the sticks? I'm open to recommendations.

Subject: Re: Music Worth It
Posted by Soundsensor on Thu, 01 Aug 2013 01:20:17 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

I guess that depends on your taste in music. For some, it might seem that there is a constant flow of good music.

I can relate to the idea of "maybe I'm getting old" very well. In fact, I have had these thoughts myself here lately when it comes to music.

While I am not prejudice toward any single genre of music, I would be a liar if I said rock was not my favorite genre. When it comes to rock, I don't think it's that I'm getting old. I think that the rock genre isn't doing so well these days.

Just to show you, go over to billboard and hit the genre tab for rock. Pick hot rock songs and look at #1. I was completely unfamiliar with the band or song. Doing a little more research and listening to the song I found that I have heard it. I just wasn't classifying it as rock in my mind.

I was of the impression that the centerpiece of rock was the six-string electric guitar. If that makes me old, then I prefer to be old.