What about those fancy gaming headphones for music?
I spent more time than I planned to trying to get away from a salesman yesterday. He thought they were exactly what I need. But he's a gamer, not a music lover.
Have any music lovers out there tried buying headphones in the gaming section?

I don't know. If the headphones are specifically geared to gamers, I would worry that they may not have the frequency response I'd want for music. I think I'd stick to the music section.

My son has some high dollar gaming headphones and they sound OK, but don't even compare to my low end AKG 240S cans. I can't imagine they would hold up to a really good set of Grados or Sennheisers.
