Yesterday I was sitting inside watching TV with all the windows closed. Suddenly the TV was drowned out by heavy bass from a car passing on the road. Fortunately it was a short-lived annoyance, but I couldn't believe how loud that car radio was. The people inside will probably be deaf by age 30.

Likely they are already deaf. Not only that but rather discourteous as well. But don't get me started on that thread.

No, go ahead Bruce. People who have their car stereos up that loud drive me crazy. I don't like physically feeling my eardrums move in and out as I do when bass is super loud. I'm sorry you had to deal with that audioaudio, but I'm glad it was not for long at least.

It happens here all the time. I live in a very busy street, so if the windows are open, you hear everything. I have never understood the need to have the stereo turned up so loud.

Yes, I'm used to hearing loud radios too but this was just insane. I find it rude too, Bruce, but what are you going to do?
