Subject: You Are a DJ
Posted by Chicken on Tue, 27 Aug 2013 13:34:51 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

I read an opinion piece about music played at hifi shows. The author claims that too often the vendors stick with safe, familiar songs and should go for different songs that interest people and hold their attention longer.

Do you think he has a point? Do people listen less to the audio characteristics if the song is overly familiar?