If you had a large DVD collection, have you started switching everything over to BluRay? We buy new movies on BluRay only but haven't bothered to convert our old DVDs over. We don't watch them very often anyway.

We're basically doing what you are doing. I see no need to go and buy all the same movies over again to get them in BluRay format, since our BluRay player will play the DVDs.

I have to agree with both of you. I own a collection of almost 500 DVD's. It doesn't make sense to me to try and buy them all again.

I'm with all of you. I don't want to go purchase a new format all over again when my player will still play DVDs. Anyway, most new movies we have are stored on our media computer and played off that.
