Are you gullible? I hate to admit it, but I often am. I'm often so wrapped up in my own thoughts that I don't think critically about something someone is telling me. My friends love teasing me about it too.

That's a pretty hard thing to admit to Chicken, I have to give you your props for that. Typically though, no, I'm really not that gullible. I question everything that everyone says to me.

When it comes to what certain women tell me, yes, I can be quite gullible. I've learned to avoid that type of woman though, so it's all good.

I wouldn't really call that gullible, you're just not that focused on other people. I can be guilty of the same thing. But no, I don't consider myself gullible. Not anymore at least.

Nope, of all my many faults being gullible isn't one of them. I have been burned enough times by others that in general I am pretty distrustful.
