Do you think The Beatles were visionary, or just very, very good?

I'm on the side that says they were very good and happened to come around at just the right time.

I think they were an exceptionally talented band and I love the evolution of their music over the years. I'm a bigger fan of the later works. I'm not really sure if I'd say they were visionary or not.

I think Paul and John were visionaries. George and Ringo were solid musicians but definitely not the driving force in the way the other two were.

I think they were very talented, that's for sure. They are still one of my favorites today and I still listen to them. I most likely will for the rest of my life.
