I just found out that Disney and LucasFilm are working on a new episode of Star Wars - episode #7. What are your thoughts on this? Do you think they are just stretching the series out too much or will you go and see it when it comes out next year?

I'm undecided about episode 7. I've heard that the original Luke Skywalker will be in it but other than that, most of the characters have died off at this point. I'm curious as to what kind of direction they could even take episode 7.

I read that link and I would love, love, love it if episode 7 was centered around Luke, Leia, and Han Solo again. The original 3 episodes have always been my favorite.

I'd like that too, but all 3 actors have aged a lot since the original movies came out. It would be really cool if Leia and Han Solo had a kid together or something like that, though. Maybe it would be his/her story that continues on.
