I just read an article stating that four people have been arrested in relation to Phillip Seymour Hoffman's death. The article says that these four people might be responsible for supplying him with the heroin he overdosed on. When the cops busted in the apartment that the four were staying in, they found over 300 bags of heroin!

I did see this in the news, and I am glad that it is 300 bags of heroin that they have taken off the street. There is no telling how many lives may have been saved by that.

I didn't see that, but I am glad that the cops were able to get it off the streets. I wonder if they will be able to get charges to stick on a murder or negligent homicide for Hoffman's death?
