Do you still get records at record stores or is that not an option for you? I think there is a record store about 30 minutes away from me by car but usually I find mine at garage sales.

We don't even have a CD store in town anymore, let alone a vintage record store! Between getting a super Wal-Mart and the whole "digital revolution," we lost our last music store probably ten years ago now.

Hi, Here in Arizona and I believe Nevada we have ZIA record exchange that carries both new and used vinyl at great prices. Locally Hastings Video store has both as well.

The Phoenix metro area still has a handful left. Zia is the big one, but there are mom and pop type stores you can find.

Hopefully there's one near you.

I live in a small community with lots of antique stores, including one that carries only vintage vinyl. I love going in there because they are always acquiring new titles. I get some of my vinyl from them but most of it is purchased during our annual festival when I am able to get some really good deals from outside vendors.
