Do you still listen to the radio, or do you just listen to songs on your Ipod, MP3 player, etc? What is or was your favorite radio station?

I listen to the radio all the time. Usually it is when I am in my car, but I also like to listen online at home. I like my local rock station the best; they have some older stuff, like Pink Floyd, but much of their rotation is new music.

I guess I'm kind of old school. I listen to a lot of radio. But really, just for background music because none of it is any good qualitatively. I listen to FM stations a lot, which are compressed. Online streaming content like Pandora is generally even worse, but I listen to that sometimes too. And in the wee hours of the night, I listen to AM and even shortwave. I love to find the crazy talk shows on late night AM and shortwave.

But when I'm sitting down listening (or I just can't stand the compressed music on the above-mentioned formats), I like to play vinyl or BluRay most of the time. I do that more often, and only listen to the radio when I'm working in the garage running compressors and stuff. All that background noise tends to mask the compression anyway.

I listen to the radio every day. I don't have Sirius radio. I just listen to our local stations. I like all kinds of music. I would say I listen to country more than anything.

I am much more likely to bring along my phone or iPod and use an AUX port to connect and listen to music that way. I rarely listen to the radio anymore.

I still do listen to the radio, but like most, it is mainly in my car. When I am at home I listen to my iPod which has Pandora and Spotify on it. I used to listen to some internet radio stations, but I haven't done that in a while.

I still listen to radio. I'm old school I guess. I like my talk radio, in particular there is a financial show on the station I like for two hours a day that I tune in for.

I listen to radio in the car if my iPod is charging. Otherwise, I'm pretty much streaming Spotify all the time now. I don't have an issue with radio in general but over the last five or ten years, we've lost all our good stations and now all we're left with are a couple that only play top 100 songs all the time. =/

I listen to the radio simply because I want to hear what someone else has programmed. If I had enough money to buy two new CD's every week I would probably forget how to use the radio.

I like to be surprised at what I'm going to hear sometimes.

I don't listen to the radio that much anymore since there never seems to be anything ever on. I usually just listen to my iPod all the time, that way I know what I want to hear will be on.

I do listen to the radio, but I listen to music on my phone too.

My main station is EIb(Rush Limbaugh), and then I just tune in to the least offensive music station I can find afterwards(usually 60-80's).

YouTube to MP3 supplies my phone.

You bet I do! Anytime I am in my car, that's what I'm listening to. The radio! I don't like listening to CD's, because I prefer a selection of different genres and songs while I'm driving. Particularly for longer car rides.

I have a NAD stereo tuner on my two-channel system. I've used it for years as a background music source. But now I'm going to try an internet "tuner" made by a company called Grace Digital. It's sort of like a Roku box but made for audio. I'll report back if I find anything worth mentioning.

I don't like CD's either. I always flip through the stations. I have been doing a lot of traveling lately in the car. I like to flip through the stations to see what everyone is playing these days.

I only listen to radio when I am on car or taxi. Sometimes I just plug my phone to the car's audio and play from my music library. Local music is not to my liking and channels I liked before are not that good anymore, so I lost interest.

I do but only on selected stations that play mostly songs from the 60s and 70s. I also can relate to the deejays on these stations and I enjoy some of their thought-provoking discussions.
