Yesterday was a frustrating day with the baby and I finally got her to sleep for the night. As I was watching TV to relax, I heard crying and started to freak out that she was awake, when I realized it was a baby crying offscreen in the show. Oh man, was I glad when I realized it wasn't my kid.

Ha ha! I have a feeling we'll be in the same boat as you come January, since we have a baby on the way. I remember my mom telling me that she had an album back in the early 80's when my brother was born and it had a baby crying in part of one of the songs; it was so realistic it always made her think it was my brother.
